Tuesday, November 14; 1:00 - 3:00 p.m. "Using Chancery Court Records in Genealogy Research" presented by James Jeffrey, Special Collections Librarian, Western History and Genealogy at the Denver Public Library

Chancery Court records are a goldmine for family historians. The hope and angst of families as played across decades and generations through Chancery Court files can reveal familial connections. Based on English Common Law, every state during the colonial and modern periods has Chancery Court records. If you have never heard of them in the course of your research this presentation will introduce you to this segment of court records where you can discover your ancestors in their most litigious moments.
